What part of the orientation was especially helpful?

All most helpful

Having time to meet with the right people from each department. I also really enjoyed the presentations of the grants and grant related projects.

Personally I found the presentation on student services particularly helpful because it introduced to me a part of academia that I was unfamiliar to me. It is wonderful to know the extensive support FIT offers to its students.

The orientation was wonderful. A perfect balance of information and meeting people, with a schedule that allowed us to take the time required to digest all the information being presented. Very thoughtfully planned, including selected guests.

Getting to meet and ask questions of so many different program heads. Hearing from faculty on how they pursue research in the context of teaching at FIT was also particularly helpful and interesting.

It was all great! Tech workshop was good; meeting other new faculty; putting faces with names across the college

What would have made the orientation more helpful?

A few thoughts - maybe more time built in for breaks. Also it would've been nice to hear from folks from the museum.

I think spreading the orientation over a three-day instead of a two-day period could be helpful since there is much to cover and this will allow new comers more time to digest the information.

It was wonderful!

It'd have been great to meet our library liaisons briefly face-to-face. A brief overview of the different schools and what they teach—or even just a chart outlining their relationships would be helpful.

Information about what is required and expected from each of us. Also more information on how to go about joining committees that fall in line with your goals here at FIT.

A presentation from the FIT Museum could for the future be a great addition.

Additional comments:

I'd be happy to serve on the committee planning next year's orientation. Thanks so much for helping orient us so thoroughly!

Overall, very well planned out!

A small note, but while the breakfast/lunches were very well done, but there weren't a lot of food options for people with dietary restrictions.
